

Catch Them While Young

ANNOUNCEMENT yesterday of a Traffic Safety Campaign to be inaugurated by the State Highway Department recalls something this writer has always mentioned, and which in fact has been advocated for several years by safety experts—and that is the teaching of proper methods in the public schools.

The undisputed fact that motor fatalities rise or fall in direct proportion to the number of cars on the highways on any given week-end, tells us definitely that there is something lacking in the training, as well as the policing, of automobile drivers.

$98 Contributed to Red Cross in First Report of Canvass

Annual Roll Call Drive Opens in County Thursday

COUNTY QUOTA 750

Good Response Is Reported in First Canvass by Committees

The annual Hempstead County Red Cross membership drive got under way Thursday when a score of authorized agents began a canvass of the business section of the city.

A total of $98 had been contributed when the first report of funds was tabulated just before noon. Linnar Cox and Rufus Herndon, Jr., completed their section of the city.

Reports from Lynnan Armstrong, Sid Bundy, the Rev. Bert Webb, the Rev. V. A. Hammond and others soliciting funds will be published Friday.

The Hempstead county quota is 750 memberships. Persons missed in the canvass may leave their donations at either First National bank or Citizens National bank. Fifty cents out of every membership is sent to national Red Cross headquarters and the balance is retained in the local treasury.

A donation of $1 is required for membership. Where a person donates more than $1 only 50 cents goes to national headquarters and the balance is kept for use of the local chapter.

The Rev. Bert Webb is chairman of the city campaign. Reginald Bearden and A. J. Wade are chairmen for the rural area, with Wayne H. England as general chairman.

Contributions will be published from day to day until the county quota is reached.

New Gadgets Used on Old Jack Frost

California Orchardists to Battle Jack Frost Under New Rules

By SAM JACKSON
AP Feature Service Writer
LOS ANGELES.—Southern California's perennial battle with Jack Frost will be fought under new rules this winter.

Aroused by the soot which smirches walls, curtains, carpets and clothing when oil-burning heaters were used to protect orchards from frost, Los Angeles County and several other com-

In the early days when autos were few a father taught his son how to drive, or perhaps directed him in the ways of common sense from the back seat. And for the number of cars on the highway in those early days that was sufficient training.

But I doubt today whether a bare majority of young drivers learn the handling of an automobile at home. Driving knowledge, such as it is, may be picked up universally.

This is no haphazard system for the public safety in a land that has 30 million cars and trucks on its highways.

We need every conceivable kind of a check to improve the training of the men and women behind America's motoring wheel.

One such check is publicity. The Sun, already this year, has published two series of "safety" articles, describing motoring signs and giving pictures of common hazards encountered on the highways, and what to do when meeting them.

But this isn't enough. The habits of older people are difficult to change, and they are notoriously hard to train in mechanical matters if such matters don't appeal to them naturally.

But in the young folks there is a chance to rear a new generation of fool-proof drivers.

Except for the touch of recklessness common to all youth, young folks are invariably better drivers than the elders.

And what they learn about sound practice on the public highways will be all to the good for the America of the future.

Emergency Gone, to Balance Budget

Secretary Morgenthau Makes Flat Promise to the Nation

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Opposing a revival of "jump priming" as unnecessary, Secretary Morgenthau pledged the Roosevelt administration Wednesday night "to balance the budget through cutting expenditures."

In what appeared to be an effort to encourage business to pull itself out of its current slump, the Treasury secretary hinted that tax "defects" would be remedied.

He advocated balancing the budget by a $695,000,000 reduction in next year's expenditures.

Government May Take One-Third of Income

NEW YORK.—(AP)—In discussing the rapid increase in cost of government here Wednesday night, Senator Byrd (Dem., Va.) said: "In 1913 the per capita income was $350. In 1936 it was $469—an increase of 34 per cent. Total government expenditures equaled $30 per capita in 1913 and $134 per capita in 1936—an increase of 347 per cent. On a per capita basis, government expenditures in 1913 represented eight per cent of the national income. In 1936 these expenditures represented 28 per cent of the national income. Public debt equaled $59 per capita in 1913 and $430 per capita in 1936."

Now about one-third of every person's income would be required to meet government expenditures if we paid as we spend. These figures refer to total government cost. Many of the states, cities and counties have yielded to the contagion of extravagance.

"In the budget of 1938 $230,000,000 of Social Security taxes is used for regular expenses. The effect of this will be to reduce the deficit by the use of a tax, collected and paid, for the specific purpose of providing old age security. One may imagine the denunciation a corporation would receive from the government if it indulged in such improper financing."

Twenty-Three Years Ago Hope Had Another State Convention--But They Were Traveling Salesmen

Being host today to the annual meeting of the Little Rock Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, carries the memories of Hope's older citizens back to another day in 1914 when the city entertained an entirely different convention—the Arkansas Travelers, a convention of traveling salesmen.

Elmer Murph, crack local amateur photographer, made these pictures of that early exciting day. How good they were is told by the pictures themselves, engraved today from negatives 23 years old.

Hope Boy Is Taken With Three Pals

Stolen Car Seized and Boys Arrested by Arkansas Policeman

TEXARKANA.—Four transient youths with but a penny between them were held in the Miller county jail Tuesday night for investigation on car theft charges after a pickup truck had been stolen from the Bessley Music company here and later wrecked just inside the city limits of Texarkana, Texas, on the Seventh street highway.

Wrecking of the car brought Police Officers Dick Runnels, Jim McCall and Ralph Merchant to the scene for a routine investigation. They found that two occupants of the machine had fled.

George Womack, 18, of Hope, returned to the wreck scene, however, and surrendered. From him officers learned the identity of his companion as well as the names of two other youths they were to have picked up after stealing the car in the 100 block on Olive street.

The two companions who waited for Womack and his confederate were picked up at Broad and Oak street. They gave their names as Herbert O'Brien, 16, West Virginia, and John

Recall Armistice in Many Nations

Roosevelt at Arlington—British Won't Let Wind-sod in Church

By the Associated Press
The men who fought the last war, and the men who may fight the next one, led the celebration of the 19th anniversary of the Armistice in many lands Thursday.

In Arlington national cemetery President Roosevelt paid tribute to the nation's dead with the traditional observance of two minutes silence before the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

The president made no speech, but Daniel J. Doherty, national commander of the American Legion, said the memory of the nation's World war dead would best be served by the "enthronement of an enduring peace."

Hysteria in England
LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—An escaped asylum inmate broke through the king's guard Thursday and with a cry of "Hypocrites!" shattered the two-minute silence of an Armistice day tribute to Britain's war dead.

King George, standing at attention during a solemn service before the World war cenotaph, ignored the disturber.

The man shouted: "All this is hypocrisy—you're deliberately preparing for war."

Duke Is Kept Out
PARIS, France.—(AP)—The Rev. J. L. C. Dart, Anglican pastor, apologized to the Duke of Windsor for an "insult" to "a man who couldn't defend himself," but the duke nevertheless shunned the Armistice day service Thursday within St. George's church here because his presence previously had been declared unwelcome.

Credit for introduction of the cigarette into English society is given to Laurence Oliphant; it did not become popular, however, until 1870.

Lay and Clerical Delegates Chosen for 'Quadrennial'

84th Methodist Conference Gets Under Way in This City

UNIFICATION 198-1

Address by Bishop Moore Opens Conference Wednesday Night

By GEORGE DOUTHITT
Associated Press Correspondent
The Methodist Conference Thursday elected all five lay delegates to the quadrennial meeting and four of five clerical delegates.

Lay delegates are: J. S. M. Cannon, Little Rock; Dr. T. E. Fuller, Texarkana; C. A. Overstreet, Magnolia; J. F. Womack, Arkadelphia, and Carl Hollis, Warren.

Clerical delegates are: J. D. Hammons, Little Rock; C. M. Reeves, Camden; Clem Baker, Little Rock, and E. C. Rule, Camden.

The conference too a ballot for final clerical delegates just before the noon recess.

President J. H. Reynolds, of Hendrix College, told the conference in an address that one of the most pressing problems of Christianity today is the training of young people.

"The stability of the country depends on training them to follow the teachings of Jesus Christ," he said.

He said the world is less safe today for democracy than it has been in the last hundred years.

He urged non-denominational religious training in the schools and charged that "the principle of separation of church and state has been allowed to be construed as separation of religion, and education."

"Let this condition go on for two or three generations," he said, "and you will have a pagan nation."

Unification Approved

The conference approved the Methodist unification plan by a vote of 198 for and only one against. Bishop Moore submitted the question. He briefly explained the limits of the plan, otherwise there was no discussion. A standing vote was taken.

In a service admitting Ralph Clayton of Junction City, Ark., in full connection, Bishop Moore commented: "Mrs. Roosevelt advised the women to be moderate in their drinking. I think you, Brother Clayton, can tell them to leave it alone." A chorus of amens followed.

Bishop Moore further asserted, "Our trouble in this country is in the breakdown among ourselves, in our families. Nothing is wrong with youth. They're doing what parents let them do."

Wednesday Night
The conference opened Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock when Bishop John M. Moore addressed the conference on "The Unity of the Church," in which he spoke of the characteristics of the several branches of the Christian church in the world today and told of the work of the conference on Faith and Order in Edinburgh, Scotland, last summer, which he attended.

In spite of the rain a large congregation filled First Methodist church. The roll of the conference was called by the secretary, Dr. C. J. Greene. The choir, under the direction of Mrs. John W. Wellborn, gave a special number.

Welcome addresses were given by Syd McMath, chairman of the board of stewards, Mayor Albert Graves, and the Rev. Fred R. Harrison, pastor-host. Bishop Moore made appropriate response to the welcome.

1938 Planes Will Be Much Faster

New Bonnets Will Enable Planes to Set New Records

By the AP Feature Service
WASHINGTON.—Air-cooled bonnets will be the style for next year's airplane engines.

It's a fashion that will bring new speed records, say engineers of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, who set the present practical speed limit at five miles a minute. The new bonnets, they hope, will make it possible to fly seven to 15 miles faster.

With the old type of bonnet—cowlings to the air-mind—air flows in over the engine and out through the skirt at the rear. The new cowlings takes air in through the center opening behind the propeller, passes it over the cylinders and then reverses the flow to send the air out through slots a few inches behind the point where it entered.

The front of the cowlings looks like two doughnuts fitted together. The rear one can be moved back and forth to adjust the location of the outlet slots.

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine.

Warts Are Common and So Are Odd Ideas as to Their Cause and Cure

This is the 18th of a series of articles in which Dr. Morris Fishben discusses diseases of the skin.

(No. 368)

The common wart is a nuisance. Some people are much more troubled with them than others. There are all sorts of strange delusions and notions about warts and these have been found to exist among peoples all over the world. For instance, in a collection of superstitions in Adams County, Illinois, the following beliefs about warts were found to prevail: that a person who has a wart will be lucky or become wealthy; that a wart on the chin means a mean disposition. In fact, there is a couplet which says "A wart on the chin is a devil within."

There are innumerable beliefs in relationship to warts and, toads. Thus it is said that if one holds a frog in the hand, one will acquire warts, or that if you kill a toad, your hands will be covered with warts. This, of course, is symbolic because the skin of the toad or the frog looks as if it were covered with warts.

There are innumerable superstitions as to healing a wart. Most of these are superstitions in which one is supposed to rub the wart with something or other, murmuring some sort of a charm and then burying the material used for rubbing the wart. The materials used for the rubbing of warts have been apples, bacon, baking soda, beans and most of the other vegetables. There are also symbolic notions relative to the removing of warts which involve drawing a mark around the wart, tying a hair around the wart, and in association with this the murmuring of a magic charm. There are people who believe that rheumatism may be removed by wearing a ring or trying a string around the rheumatic joint.

Another series of superstitions involves the tying of knots in a string—as many knots as you have warts—murmuring a charm and then burying the string in a graveyard.

All of these are symbolic notions representing the idea of tying away the affected area, or transferring the condition to something else which is buried. These ideas may give comfort, but there is no real scientific proof that they have any value.

NEXT: What science does about warts.

The A. F. of L. and C. I. O. having refused each other's demands for unconditional surrender, the next session of the "compromise conference" ought to be able to discuss actual compromise offers.

CHAPTER XX

THE soft closing of the front door behind Jill had not disturbed John Wentworth, who sat in a deep chair by the fire in his study. It had not disturbed Barry, who had gone back to the music room when Jill fled upstairs, and now was sprawled on a cushioned divan in the music room.

John Wentworth had been sitting there, his eyes on the fire, since the close of a second and briefer conference with Oscar Montagne.

The second conference had been very different from the first. In the first he had pitted his wits against a man who had once been his friend. A man who had turned suddenly into an enemy, determined upon his ruin.

And then, Jill had come in to announce her engagement to Oscar Montagne's son. There had been a second transformation then, even more startling than the first. Everything had been sweetness and light.

They had gone back to the study from the ballroom. He and Montagne. "I've been wrong," Montagne had said gruffly. "I had become frightened, I suppose by the changing aspects, affecting big business. But families must hold together. I'm going to stick with you, of course, John. I'm sure I can swing the others back into line. The loan will go through, of course, though it's a bigger loan than I would extend any other man at this time."

But winning the battle had brought no glow of victory. It was humiliating to find suddenly that the balance of power through which he was holding his immense investments was a sheer economic hairline; and that the loss of one powerful financial adherent could change the scene that his own power, personality and business acumen had kept in its present focus.

He was tired. Infinitely weary of the strain. And there would be months of wary watchfulness and conciliation before his business would swing clear again—beyond what he now saw was a vicious financial circle. He had got himself in this plight by depending too much on the friendship of three men. And friendship had failed him.

Or rather, it would have failed him if Jill had not become engaged to Milo Montagne. He was troubled about Jill. He had never believed she cared anything for Milo. Could it be possible that she had realized the strain being put upon him?

HE could not bear to think that. It couldn't be true that Jill had sacrificed herself for him. She had come in too radiant and proud. She must have become fond of Milo. He hoped she was not dazzled by Milo's great wealth.

He got up suddenly, glancing at the clock. Twenty minutes to six. Great heaven, he had been here for hours going over the same ground and getting nowhere beyond the fact that his business trials were over, for the present at least.

He walked heavily toward the hall. When he had gone to his study the place had blazed with lights. The entrance was a gloomy cavern now, but a faint glow came from the music room.

His faint smile was erased as he reached the door of the music room. The light there was blazing down from a glittering chandelier. It revealed the figure of Barry, his head buried in a pillow. The lines of worry deepened on John Wentworth's weary face as he studied the sleeper, tinking in the flushed face and tousled hair.

The fool. The besotted young fool. He should have a real raking down. Yet it would probably do no good. A hard, impenetrable sheet of callousness and ruthlessness had grown over any many qualities Barry might once have had. He hated to believe Barry had never possessed those qualities.

He moved and Barry opened drink-dull eyes, meeting the quiet brooding gaze of his stepfather.

"So it's my thoughtful parent. Might I inquire the reason for the suddenly fatherly interest that would fix me a night cap and tuck me in bed?"

"Come into my study, Barry," his stepfather said, sternly. "I have wanted to talk with you a long while. But I kept hoping."

"Oh, can the chatter," Barry retorted. He stumbled to his feet and followed his father across the hall and into the room where the fire had burned down to ruddy embers.

John Wentworth closed the door and motioned to a chair across from him. "Sit there," he commanded.

Barry slumped into a chair, his eyes filled with malicious light. He lit a cigaret and began to smoke, one hand nervously toying with a heavy marble paperweight that held down some papers on his father's desk.

"Shoot," Barry said. "And then maybe I'll do some talking. I'm sick and tired of being treated like a beggar in this family."

"That's what you are!" Mr. Wentworth's voice was unexpectedly violent. "I've tried to be lenient and patient with you, Barry. I've waited to see some signs of settling down. But you've kept on. Spending, wasting, drinking. You're a grown man and yet you've never earned a nickel in your life. All you do is to whine for more money to waste. You don't know it, Barry, but we've been skating on thin ice. Perhaps it's my fault that none of you realized it. I've tried to keep my family from worry."

"You don't get anywhere talking depression stuff," Barry growled. "I know you're lousy with money. And if I'm a beggar, I suppose your fine Jack is—"

"All I could ever want is a son," John Wentworth spoke fervently. "I suppose you're planning to leave him a big slice, and cut me out."

John Wentworth spoke heavily: "Your mother came to me about the will, also, Barry. I told her I would be just about it. But I didn't tell her what I planned to do. I'm going to change my will. I think the fairest thing to you would be to have your share held in trust while you make a man of yourself. If in five years after my death you've proved—"

Barry, his hand still clutching the heavy marble paperweight, had leaped to his feet. His voice rose in a vicious shout: "You couldn't get away with it. I won't let you—"

He rushed toward his father, his hand still raised.

John Wentworth rose to his feet, putting a hand up as though to ward off a blow. His pale lips moved, but no words came.

Before Barry reached him, he had crumpled suddenly, his head striking the andirons on the hearth.

Suddenly sobered, Barry lifted his father up.

There was something about the still, white face. . . . In horror, Barry placed his father back on the rug, and got to his feet. A cry was stifled on his lips.

In Hollywood

Scenarist Does an Editorial on a Picture He Didn't Write

Paul Harrison's guest columnist today is John Wexley, playwright who wrote "The Last Mile," "They Shall Not Die" and "Steel," who is now a Warner Bros. scenarist.

By JOHN WEXLEY

At least once in a lifetime, every citizen longs to put pen to a novel, every novelist desires to do a play, every playwright yearns to do a film scenario. . . . and every Hollywood scenarist swears that as soon as his bank account totals exactly half a million (not a cent more), he will fly to that little island off the coast of Maine and there write the Great American Novel.

Nothing novel about this. Now I am perhaps one of those playwrights, who, as an exception to the above, proves the rule. My own particular ambition has been a long-smoldering and consuming one . . . to write an editorial!

Now, ordinarily, when one writes from the film capital, where I am at present confined, one writes with an attempt toward what is known here as humor. But I give full warning that what follows is to be utterly and extremely serious. So serious that for days I have been finding it difficult to refrain from shouting from the rooftops for Americans to run to the nearest picture house and to see the newsreels of the Shanghai bombings.

Murdered Children

I have seen the terror on the faces of condemned convicts in a death-house. I have seen the mangled corpses of reckless automobile drivers . . . but this is all as absolutely nothing. Those condemned convicts were sentenced, were prepared for their doom. Those automobile drivers disregarded other people's rights, took their chances, flew into death like moths into a flame and possibly they all deserved it.

But the remains of these people that you see in this Shanghai newsreel once they formed innocent human beings. Innocent, laughing, playing children . . . boys and girls.

There in Los Angeles our sons and daughters go to the public schools with these Chinese children . . . you see them on the streets and in the street cars and you talk with them. The little tots look like toy dolls, you want to pick them up and hug them to yourself and toss them in the air.

But go and see these Chinese children in Shanghai! For here is war? War as it is, as it will be and as it has been . . . in Ethiopia, in Spain, in Manchuria.

See this war and you will see that war is ghastly, horrible, incredibly inhuman. Not for a single moment will you thrill to its glory . . . or feel or see the remotest evidence of bravery or courage.

No Defense

Nor will you, if you stare at this newsreel for two minutes as I did, avoid the inevitable decision . . . that intelligence is not the slightest defense against death from the sky in the form of a bomb.

Your shelter is shelled, fortunately you escape the falling debris . . . you want only to rush across the street to find another basement or doorway . . . but already you are the target of a machine gunner in a swooping airplane. You can't outwit a modern machine gun in a 200-mile-per-hour plane.

All of this is morbid, terrifying, but it must be seen—to realize, to understand, to know! It must be seen in the schools and colleges, in every moving picture house available. Above all, it must be projected in the jingoist clubs, in the swanky sanctuaries of the Navy Lounges, in the granite citadels of the Wall Street stockbrokers, in the luxurious mansions of the munitions manufacturers. But more than anywhere else . . . this horrible, ghastly newsreel of man's cruelty to man should be shown to the Japanese war lords, to Herr Hitler, to Signor Mussolini, and Senor Franco. I, for one, am certain that Purgatory contains at least this punishment for them . . . an eternal newsreel of their accomplishments.

BARBS

Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., who graduated from college at 23 and became a vice president of General Motors shortly thereafter, is made chairman of U. S. Steel at 38—proving what a young man accomplish by grit, perseverance and being the son of a Morgan partner.

If the nine-power conference doesn't get going pretty soon, its functions as far as China is concerned will strangely resemble those of a coroner's jury.

As soon as the geologists find out why the bottom dropped out of that western farm, they're going to try to find out why it fell out of the stock market the other day.

DOLLARS WASTED ON UPKEEP CAN'T BUY NEW ROADS.

Inferior roads seem cheap and easy to build. They stretch a paving fund so that it covers a lot of territory. But after a year or two, the trouble begins! Maintenance costs go up and up. Soon all your paving money is spent on upkeep . . . and no more new roads are built.

That's why it's wise—and economical—to build concrete roads. Concrete lasts! It requires almost no upkeep. Each year, the paving fund builds more miles of concrete until the whole job is done—for keeps! Concrete's smooth, non-skid surface is safe and satisfactory to drive on. It speeds up traffic . . . reduces accidents . . . saves gas, tires and repairs.

Get concrete. Insist on it—for safety, comfort and economy.

PROOF THAT NEW MOTOR OIL SAVES MOTOR WEAR

- 1 SAVE CARBON CLEANING
- 2 SAVE WEAR AND REPAIRS
- 3 SAVE GASOLINE
- 4 SAVE IN OIL ADDITIONS
- 5 SAVE ON OIL PURCHASES

Buy Naturalube and Save 5 Ways
MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE: To any dealer who displays the Lion Naturalube sign, you have a fair trial—then, if in your opinion it is not the best oil you have used—return it—your money will be refunded—without question. Ask for illustrated literature giving complete facts about this distinctly better motor oil.

Lion Naturalube STRONGER NATURAL FILM

Since only a thin film of oil protects the working parts of your motor from excessive wear, it is any wonder that automotive engineers agree that the safety of your motor depends on the strength of your oil film?

Scientific tests prove Naturalube's protective oil film is stronger than that of most premium quality oils. This stronger, natural film gives motor parts greater protection against excessive motor-wear which begins when the oil film breaks down. The extra margin of safety provided by Naturalube saves motor wear and expensive repair bills.

Removes CARBON and Adds POWER
By removing power-destroying hard carbon from pistons, rings, valves and spark plugs, Naturalube adds power; saves gasoline and oil; and prevents costly repairs.

No foreign materials are added to Naturalube. Its greater film strength and carbon removing quality come from the rare, basically different kind of crude oil from which it is refined—and Lion's special new refining process.

Use Naturalube—the safest oil you can buy. Its greater film strength with a wide margin of safety and carbon removing quality will protect your motor against excessive wear. The next time you buy motor oil, buy Naturalube and start saving five ways. Save carbon cleaning; save motor wear; save gasoline; save in oil additions; and save on oil purchases. Sold by all Lion stations and dealers. Look for the Lion.

Armistice Day—November 11

In France the swaying poppies shed their flame-like petals where the dead are sleeping quietly. Like drops of blood they mark the spot where young manhood yielded its life that "Truth might know its fullest liberty." Betty Enrolls Lum 'n Abner

That's Lum on the Left. Lum and Abner, top-notch radio stars, have joined the Pine Ridge chapter of the American Red Cross.

"Yeah, and I reckon them folks and neighbors 'o' our back there at Pine Ridge air jest about th' smartest people anywhere around," chuckled Lum as he skinned his name to a check.

"Yes, sir!" agreed Abner. "Why, I'll be ciggered if I don't think they could talk Crosby into bettin' on one of his own horses. Smart folks back there in Arkansas. Slead 'o' writin' us a letter, they jest got that cut little trick, Betty Grable, to com right up to see us, slick as a button, and tell us about the Red Cross."

"Heh-Heh," giggled Abner. "Lum, you shore war a fidgetin' thar when you was a tryin' to tell Miss Grable how you knowed what a wonderful and worthy cause the Red Cross be."

It proves that they have made an impression as a person. Remember, too, the more that you find out about a person the easier it will be for you to remember his name. Even the smallest bits of information give you something on which to hang his name.

Fear is the worst foe of personality. Inside you are friendly, anxious to like others, and eager for them to like you. But you are afraid to show that friendliness for fear it will be misunderstood and you will be snubbed. Only with people that you feel are your inferiors are you able to be yourself.

Most Are in Same Boat It sounds like a pretty hopeless sort of situation—but cheer up. At least half of the people in the world are like you. And psychologists say that all of us have some fears caused by feeling of inferiority along some lines.

Take advantage of the psychologist's secret that all people feel inferior at times, and set about putting other people at ease. Don't stand silent when you meet another person. Start talking to him. Find out everything you can about that stranger, telling him just as little as you can about yourself. And when you part company, it's ten to one he will leave you saying, "My, what an interesting person." And more than that, he'll probably bless you in his heart for your friendliness. For underneath his fine clothes he probably was as ill-at-ease and embarrassed as you were. (Copyright 1937, NEA, Service, Inc.)

Romantic Ties

Undergraduates at Princeton and Yale are sporting a new faddish tie that appears at first glance to be merely a very fine dot all-over pattern. Closer inspection, however, proves that the pattern is made up of lines of lettering that say "She would have me, she won't have me she would have me—" and "She would if she could be she can't."

Hope Boy Is Taken

Niedzilek, 17, New York City. Two hours later, after the trio had been turned over to Sheriff Tom Sewell, the fourth member of the party was captured by State Police Officer S. R. Copeland, who found Thomas Byrd, 17, of West Virginia, hiding in a vacant store building where three of the four boys slept Monday night. He admitted, Sheriff Sewell said, that he and Womack had taken the car. After he fled the wreck scene the youth said he made his way back to the vacant store building in the hope of eluding officers.

Bensley's truck was damaged considerably.

Arrested by Copeland

State Police Officer S. R. Copeland of Hope, who figured in the investigation of the car theft at Texarkana, said Thursday that he had arrested two other youths in a separate case of automobile theft.

Copeland said he arrested two youths who gave their names as Harold Rauch 19, and Richard Buster, 18, of New York and California, for the theft of an automobile at Venton, La.

Arrest of the two youths and the recovery of the stolen car occurred near Fulton, Louisiana officers have been notified and the two youths will face charges in Louisiana, Copeland said.

Ownership of the car was traced to the major of Venton, La.

AMERICA'S MOST COPIED RADIO AGAIN A YEAR AHEAD

We, the Women

By Ruth Millett

Personality Is Interest in Others

Personality is not inherited. It is developed by the trial and error method of getting along with people. But since the method is slow, and often costly, the wise person learns what he can from the mistakes and successes of others.

One thing that he should not have to find out for himself is the importance of remembering the people he meets. It is important to remember their names, their faces, and what they are doing in the world.

Don't go around saying to people, "I always remember faces, but I can't remember names to save my life." It isn't a thing to be proud of, and besides, you can remember names if you take a little trouble.

Make Sure of Name When you are introduced to another person and the name is mumbled so that you are not sure whether it is Simon or Simmons, ask to have it repeated. Then say it over to yourself a few times until you are sure that you know it. When you leave Mrs. Simmons—if it was Simmons, and not Simon—call her by name. People like the sound of their own names.

Russellville Team Prepares To Invade Hope Friday

Minor, Tackle, Is Reported Injured

Star of Russellville Line Has Leg Injury, Not Likely to Play

RUSSELLVILLE, Ark.—The Russellville Cyclones minus the services of Jimmy Minor, 197-pound tackle, are preparing for their invasion of Hope for a conference game Friday night.

Minor, mentioned for all-state last year, has an injured leg that will probably keep him out of play for two weeks, Coach Wallace Bailey said.

The absence of Minor from the line-up dims the prospects of the locals for victory in their clash with Coach Foy Hammons' powerful Bobcats, which are said to average 175 pounds to the man.

Masters, Aslin, and Bright are the stars of the Bobcats' attack. Bright, triple-threat and main bid of the Bobcats for all-state honors, is just recovering from an injured ankle, and is expected to play against the Cyclones.

Ramsay, 180, and Quinby and Stone, tackles, are the mainstays of the Bobcat line. Stone was all-state last year. The Cyclones are spending the week on the timing of power plays, fakes, and passing. Although the Cyclones have shown a powerful offense, capable of making two or three touchdowns on all comers so far this year, their defense has been ragged, and Minor will be greatly missed.

The Cyclones will leave Friday morning in cars and will return home immediately following the game.

Carlene Bruner Is Queen.
Miss Carlene Bruner, attractive blonde, was chosen by the football team and student body of Hope High School as homecoming queen for the Bobcat-Russellville game to be played here Friday night.

The selection of Miss Bruner to reign over festivities was announced at noon Thursday. Chosen as her maids of honor are:

Mayor Albert Graves will crown Miss Bruner, a senior high school student, as queen just before the kickoff which has been set for 8 o'clock.

She will then present G. V. Keith, captain of the Bobcat team, the football to be used in the game, and to the Russellville captain she will present a wreath of flowers.

Work on New Plays.
Clear skies and sunshine heartened the Bobcat team Thursday as Coach Foy Hammons prepared to send his charges through the final practice session Thursday afternoon.

STAR DUST

By LEONARD ELLIS

The Hope High School football team will play its fifth and final conference game of the season here Friday night against the Russellville High School Cyclones.

A victory would put the Bobcats over the 500 percentage point, having won two and lost two in the "Big 15."

As you know, Hope won over Benton and Jonesboro and then lost to Camden and Blytheville in the conference. Opponents of the Bobcats have two victories in the conference against only one defeat.

The conference crown will probably be settled this Saturday afternoon at Pine Bluff when the Little Rock Tigers and the Zebra clash in the 21st annual game.

A win for the Tigers would leave only North Little Rock in the path of Coach Clyde Van Sickle's team toward an undefeated season.

A victory for Pine Bluff would give the Zebra their eighth conference victory against no defeats. It will be the final conference game for the Zebra.

Regardless of the outcome, up in northeast Arkansas the Blytheville Chicks are undefeated and will probably lay a claim to the title. Only Jonesboro and Forrest City stand in Blytheville's way and it is not likely that either Jonesboro or Forrest City will win from the Chicks.

The rules, however, provide that the championship shall be awarded on a percentage basis, and that in case of a tie, the title shall go to the team which has played the greatest number of games.

Blytheville will have played five conference games when the season ends, Little Rock seven and Pine Bluff eight. In the event of a draw between Little Rock and Pine Bluff, say a 0 to 0 game, Blytheville then would have the best record from a percentage standpoint.

And speaking of Blytheville, here is good news for the Bobcats as they meet the Chicks on the Hope field next year:

Eight regulars and two reserves are playing their last season for the Chicks. Players to be lost by graduation are Captain Mercedith, Homer Beshore, "Bronch" Brown, back; Bob Roberts, James Burton, Lloyd Wise, Mildred Bunch, Calvin Moody, Peck Hardin and Dick Burns, linemen.

And now for some pickup picks: Russellville at Hope, Hope 13, Russellville 6. And if Bright and Aslin are not in the game, I didn't predict it.

Little Rock at Pine Bluff. We are pulling for Pine Bluff, but we PICK Little Rock to win. The Zebra have deception, but without McGibney, the Tigers are too powerful. Little Rock 13, Pine Bluff 7.

Searcy at Blytheville. Blytheville 31, Searcy 0.

Camden at Fordyce. Camden 27, Fordyce 6.

El Dorado at Hot Springs. Hot Springs 14, El Dorado 7.

Prescott at Benton. Benton 19, Prescott 0.

new plays in an effort to strengthen the offense. It remained doubtful whether Vasco Bright and Edward Aslin would see action in the Russellville game.

Other members of the squad are expected to be in shape. The game will be the final conference tilt of the season for Hope, and the Bobcats are anxious to win as their standings are two losses and two wins inside the conference.

Tickets will go on sale Friday morning at Hope Confectionery and Jacks Newsstand. The price is 50 cents.

Vandy Coach Says Rules All Right

Ray Morrison Declares Offense Will Catch Up With Defense

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(AP)—Take Ray Morrison's word for it, the offense will catch up with the defense if the football rules committee will just leave the rules alone.

The Vanderbilt coach, daddy of the razzle-dazzlers, admits that defense fireworks have dominated the current season, but added "the defense and offense even up over the long run."

"I am not one of those who thinks the wide-open attack is going out. Rather, I believe it is as popular as ever—but it is getting commonplace. A few years ago it was a novelty."

"Many of our teams are not scoring as they have in the past. That's true of my team, I know. Tampering with the rules isn't a remedy; the rules should be left alone and the offense will swing back into the limelight."

Morrison, who rode to fame on the aerial circus popularized by his Southern Methodist University teams, said defensive excellence should be a challenge to coaches to devise new scoring tactics.

He recalled that the five-man defensive line made its first appearance in the Southwest about 20 years ago.

"Down there the team trailing in the final quarter began throwing innumerable passes," he said. "In defense, their opponents would go into a five-man line."

"But even against that setup many of the aerials were completed. That's where I first got the idea of using so many passes at all times during a game. Why shouldn't they work throughout the game if they worked so well in the last period?"

"The wide-open attack spread to all parts of the country and naturally coaches began devising a defense for it. Hence, the stress on defense. Now it's up to the coaches to produce new stuff to balance the game and I'm sure they will do it."

No More Coaching by Army Officers

War Department to End Football Coaching by Officers

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The War Department said Wednesday that the resignation of Lieut. Col. Ralph Sasse as football coach at Mississippi State College ended grid coaching by army officers.

Sasse, the department said, was the last of a group of officers who held army assignments and coached football simultaneously. The group included Maj. Robert Neyland and Maj. Lawrence M. (Biff) Jones.

They resigned from the army after an adjutant general's order in December, 1935, abolished football coaching by army officers but permitted officers under coaching contracts to continue coaching until the contracts expired.

Hot Springs Adopting a Resolution Expressing Confidence in Him as a Teacher and His Belief That He Is One of the Best of the High School Football Coaches

HOT SPRINGS—Adopting a resolution expressing confidence in him as a teacher and his belief that he is one of the best of the high school football coaches, the Hot Springs School Board Wednesday night unanimously declined to accept the resignation of Mervin Perry, High School athletic director and instructor in history.

The resolution set forth that the board had considered circumstances that might have prompted Coach Perry to desire to step out of the local picture.

Perry said he had no comment to make. He did not attend the meeting. He offered his resignation a few days ago, following Trojans' continued losing streak in football.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—(AP)—A fourth Cotton States Baseball League entry from Arkansas appeared in prospect Wednesday when a group of business men announced Hot Springs was prepared to acquire a franchise in the circuit.

Informed by J. Walter Morris, league president, that Vicksburg, Miss., had surrendered its franchise, the group said that local financial backing, through subscription, and arrangements for a park had been assured.

Morris told the business men that Natchez, Miss., also sought a membership and the league would have to decide between the two. He said the Pine Bluff, El Dorado and Helena clubs favored the Hot Springs entry. The resort city team would play night baseball except on Sundays.

Predicts Ole Miss to Beat Arkansas

Mississippi Coach Says Team Will Toss as Many as Porkers

UNIVERSITY, Miss.—(AP)—Parker Hall and Ray Hapes, a pair of hard running, passing halfbacks, will lead the Rebels of Mississippi against Arkansas Saturday in Memphis in what Coach Ed Walker believes will be an Ole Miss victory.

He said that his team will throw as many passes as does Arkansas.

Walker said he expected his line, headed by Capt. "Bruiser" Kinard, to outshine any combination Arkansas could put on the field.

Woman Explorer Captures Panda

Is One of the Most Intelligent Animals in the Chicago Zoo

To a lone woman explorer, Mrs. William H. Harkness, Jr., goes the credit for the capture of the only live giant panda in captivity. Although innumerable expeditions had gone after pandas, less than a dozen persons had succeeded in seeing one alive and only four skins had been obtained.

Mrs. Harkness succeeded not only in capturing the animal alive but in transporting it half way across the world without a mishap. When the animal was found in a hollow log in the bamboo forests of southwestern China on November 9, 1936 it weighed only three pounds and still had its eyes closed. Today, thanks to the careful supervision of Mrs. Harkness, the panda weighs more than fifty pounds and is one of the most interesting, lively and apparently intelligent animals in the Chicago Zoological Park.

Mrs. Harkness named the panda "Su-lin," which means "a little bit of something precious." The name is very appropriate, considering that the animal is regarded as the most valuable animal in captivity.

A hot Quaker Oats breakfast with plenty of sugar and cream is the choice of many who have to guard their nerves and digestion. Mrs. Harkness, who is regarded as one of the country's greatest explorers, says, "I consider Quaker Oats a splendid breakfast for active people."

"THE HOPE STAR IS ACROSS THE STREET"

New Gadgets Used

munities have passed "anti-smudge" ordinances.

The new laws decree that no heater—or "smudge pot"—shall emit more than one gram of smoke a minute. Portable laboratory equipment that accurately measures the smoke in the atmosphere already has been ordered by Sheriff Eugene Biscailuz of Los Angeles county.

Now growers are seeking means to protect the state's $100,000,000-a-year citrus crop without burning the general public. C. C. Teague, president of the giant Sunbelt co-operative, has offered a $5,000 prize for the best improvement in frost protection.

Suggestions Numerous

The offer has brought some unusual ideas.

Arthur Seymour Martin has devised a giant atomizer to create an artificial fog over orange or lemon groves. This, he thinks, would reflect the earth's radiating heat back to the surface.

At Escondido, Ralph Cook has devised an "overcoat," on the same principle as the human overcoat, for trees.

Col. Charles H. Rutherford of Phoenix, Ariz., says to let the fruit go ahead and freeze, since a spray he has compounded will preserve its juiciness and edibility anyway.

Of groved value, according to Dr. Irving Krick of California Tech, are the lofty wind machines already in operation in many orchards. Propellers driven by 100-horsepower engines churn the air in the citrus groves to mix up the strata of warm and cold and thus equalize temperature. An improved type has a heater in connection, and produces something like a warm, desert wind.

Rubber Smudges

The new activity follows the disastrous freeze of January, 1937, when the growers' organizations estimated more than $5,000,000 was spent smudging in a few days. Oil and transportation ran short. Frantic orchardists bid against each other for fuel. Many had to turn to any fuel at hand—notably old rubber tires—and the resulting smoke pall was immediate cause of the new anti-smudge ordinances.

When smudging started in 1896, it was thought it was the smoke itself that saved oranges and lemons from frostbite. University of California scientists now have demonstrated that heat is the effective agent—hence an efficient and not-too-costly "smokeless heater" would be an Aladdin's lamp to the rich west coast orange empire.

Pep Rallies Hit by Baylor Coach

Midnight Rally Injured Team Instead of Helping It

WAGO, Texas.—(AP)—Until Saturday Baylor University boasted the nation's fourth-ranking football team—then underrated Texas University beat the Bears, 9 to 6.

Mortley Jennings, 25 years a football coach, told the student body: "Your midnight pep meetings hurt the team instead of help. Football has no place for hysteria such as has been demonstrated here. Football is a game and must be taken as a game. These boys are here first to go to school. That is the kind of athletes we want at Baylor."

sideration at the special session of Congress next week.

Morgenthau advocated broadening the base of the income tax structure, so that more persons would pay such levies, and suggested abolition of some consumer taxes, sometimes called "nuisance levies."

Opposed to Spending

Comparing present conditions with those of four years ago, the administration's spokesman said: "We deliberately used an unbalanced federal budget during the past four years to meet a great emergency. That policy has succeeded. The emergency that we faced in 1933 no longer exists."

We dispute the contentions of some persons "that another great spending program is desirable to ward off the risk of another business depression."

"I claim," he said, "no prophetic insight into the future. But I have reached the firm conviction that the domestic problems which face us today are essentially different from those which faced us four years ago. Many measures are required for their solution. One of these measures, but only one, in the present juncture, is a determined movement toward a balanced budget."

Asserting that 1937's business activity has been of "a healthy character" and unmarred by the usual symptoms of "an unhealthy boom," he said "we have not reached the state of full employment of our productive resources."

"On the contrary," he said, "from all these standpoint, conditions are favorable for a continued increase in the level of business activity."

At another point, Morgenthau asserted that "the basic need today is to foster the full application of the driving force of private capital."

Smaller Outlays on Roads

He said the administration could not "prudently" expect any more revenues in the next fiscal year than the $6,550,000,000 predicted for this year and that instead of imposing higher taxes "we would plan to bring next year's expenditures within this year's income."

The reductions should be made, he explained, in classes of expenditures which have been mainly responsible for past deficits. He said highway expenditures should be slashed from this year's outlay of $253,000,000 to the pre-depression level of less than $100,000,000. No specific figures were given to indicate how deeply he believes reductions should be made in spending for agriculture, relief and public works.

He continued that "no agricultural program can long endure which makes excessive demands upon the federal Treasury, or is unfair to consumers."

More People to Pay

Morgenthau introduced his discussion of methods of equalizing the tax burden with the statement that "our tax revenues come largely from individual earnings and business profits. We do not wish to impose levies which tend to dry up these sources of tax revenue."

"The laws should be so written and administered that the taxpayers can continue to make a reasonable profit with a minimum of interference from his own federal government," he continued.

"The amount of our income tax revenue is only about half our internal revenue. Less than 3,000,000 people out of our total population pay individual federal income taxes."

"We would be applying the principle of capacity to pay more justly if we were to reduce the number of consumer taxes and at the same time increase the number of income taxpayers. Taxpayers who are squarely confronted with their own tax burdens are bound to be keenly alive to the way the money is being spent by their government."

In speaking of curing tax defects, he did not refer by name to the undistributed profits tax or the capital gains and losses tax, levies which business interests are especially anxious to modify. Treasury experts have been discussing changes in these taxes in
